

HUNT BOMB-SENDER WITH DRY BATTERY AS LEADING CLUE

Police Find Power Part of Infernal Machine Sent Importer Was Exhausted.

Four-dry batteries such as are used in pocket electric flashlights form the principal clue on which Detectives O'Connell and Barron are working today to establish the identity of the man who sent an infernal machine to George Tosplitt, Vice-President and manager of the A. S. Rosenthal Company, silk importers, No. 113 Madison avenue.

From another member of the firm the detectives learned that the batteries St lamps frequently employed by silk merchants. Perishable stock which exposure to light would injure was kept in dark closets and basements and the tags, at stocktaking inspection, are generally examined by the aid of such pocket lamps.

A strange feature of the investigation is the fact that the batteries in the machine sent to Mr. Tosplitt were exhausted and would not have given a spark even if proper electric connections had been made.

The machine consisted of a cigar box of the size in which fifty cigars are packed. It had been painted a brilliant red with metallic paint, was wrapped in manilla paper and addressed in typewriter in purple ink.

The cover of the box was arranged so that an electric connection would be established by its removal, and the batteries had they been in working order, would have communicated a spark to a bag containing about an ounce and a half of cheap black powder.

Inspector Owen Egan of the Bureau of Combustibles, who opened and examined the machine, said that even had there would have been an explosion. He believes the powder would merely have flashed.

Mr. Tosplitt was forced to leave his office today to escape the visits of friends congratulating him on his escape. Before he went, however, he said he had no idea why the bomb had been sent. He said there was no recognized employee in his firm and a know of an employee.

The typewritten address resembled the handwriting of two letters, the first of which Mr. Tosplitt got two weeks ago and which cautioned him that his firm was being robbed. He was advised to advertise in a newspaper if he wished an interview with the writer.

He did not do so, and last week came the second letter warning him that his life was in danger and advising him that the writer, who lived in the city, could not save him. Then came the package, which Mr. Tosplitt did not open, but sent for the police.

FEAR PLAGUE ABOARD SHIP HERE FROM ITALY

Italian Customs Men Stricken After Visiting Cerea at Catania, Consul Warns.

The Italian tramp steamer Cerea, which arrived at Quarantine at day-break from Catania, Italy, will not be permitted to enter the harbor because of advice from the United States Consul at Catania that a member of her crew is probably afflicted with bubonic plague.

In the cablegram received at Washington and forwarded to Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell, Quarantine Officer, it was stated that a day after the Cerea sailed seventeen customs inspectors who had been aboard her fell ill with the plague. Simpson, Spence and Young, to whom she was chartered with a cargo of foodstuffs, was notified that if they wanted to take off the steamer's cargo they would have to do so with lighters.

Get Dr. Edwards'
Olive Tablets.

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid liver.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No gripping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.
